OPC's Psychotherapists and Counsellors come from many different backgrounds and have been trained to help with: depression, anxiety, ocd, work-related stress, post-traumatic stress, parenting and other relationship challenges, ...and other issues unique to your particular situation and life experience. Our therapists practice many different types of psychotherapy and counseling techniques and offer individual therapy and couples counseling, and help for dealing with difficulties unique to same-sex relationships, blended family, transgender challenges, or parenting support. Psychotherapy and counseling with experienced graduates of the Ontario Psychotherapy Training and Counseling Certificate Program can be provided on a sliding scale, and low cost counseling and therapy is offered with senior student therapists of the program. The OPC Training Program typically takes a minimum of five years to complete, and is geared to meeting and exceeding standards established by professional associations of psychotherapists and counselors.
